SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1880.

Prince Leopold and his sister Princess Louise are making a tour through the Western States. They travel incog. to avoid publicity, which seems to be perfectly ridiculous to the young Prince.

The Dominion Parliament prorogued on Wednesday by a report that a young lad had been killed at his father's residence in Ontario street, and that previous to his death he made a deposition before Coroner Jarman, J. P., that he had been abused by David Bowman, of Portsmouth, and that he was weaning and that his illness was the result of the ill-treatment received at his hands. These facts were corroborated by the deposition was suppressed, and the matter being laid before Coroner Jarman an inquest was ordered on the remains of the deceased, which were held on Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. The following was the Jury empanelled:

The Rossmore Cheese Factory commenced operations on Monday last. The following are the officers:—Charles Coverlin, President; Jno Fitzgerald, Secretary-Treasurer; Jno. Sharpe, Cheese Maker; Wm. Hall, Assistant Cheese Maker; Jno. Millinger, Engineer; Jno. Coverlin, Fireman; Jno. Fitzgerald, Jno. Sharpe, Wm. Hall, Directors.

the praises of the pup were being sung, he muttered a vague assent. That interesting animal, meanwhile, was manoeuvring steadily in the direction of his old ally.

"A's a bit gloppened, ye see, sir," said Isaac, apologetically.

Corkrane cast an imploring glance at his friend.

"Arabin, upon my honor—Arabin of the present writer," said Brankenbury, answering the mute appeal.

"How much do you want for him?" asked Corkrane impetuously.

Old Isaac pulled up the pup, balanced it in the palm of his hand as if it were a bomb-shell, opened its mouth, plumbed the last, barrel, and it this way and that, and finally put it on its legs again.

"I'll be worth a matter o' twenty pun' agin' you poor yard," said he.

"Then you would do better to keep it."

"Mayhappen I would; but you see, sir, I'm an old man, d'ye see."

"Which, being translated, means that the pup hasn't lost the distemper," laughed Lancelot. "Come, Isaac, you mustn't be too clever."

"Eh, Master Brankelby, sir; but pups is a rum sort o' lowcast, and I'd feder get shot on 'em as nurse 'em useless. That's what reason."

Lancelot, meanwhile, to Mr. Peart's intense amusement, had picked up a tile that lay at the end of the bench, and was pretending to exercise himself in a prolonged "put" at the pup's head. Isaac looked on with a pained expression of face.

"Master Lancelot, sir, I'm sorry to say, is a bit given to practical joking," he remarked
